Chapter 1 by Magdalene

We are them. We are the builders. We are the creators. We are the Warriors.

We are looked up at. We are praised.

But trouble has come and we are wounded. There are thirteen of us although there used to be dozens more. We have told our subjects, our brothers, to flee for it is not safe.

But we will fight. Water, Fire, Earth, Lightning, Gold, Silver, Ice, Iron, Mercury, Platinum, Titanium, Oxygen, and Carbon.

We are the Warriors. And my element is Mercury.

Chapter 2 by Kaitweh E.S

There is a war happening through out the universe. My friend, Moon used to say that the war will not reach us. But she was wrong. We were walking in the Southern forest when a warrior dressed in all black stepped out of the shadows. Moon was more skilled than I was at the time and she told me to run, I did. When i had entered the village walls i turned and headed strait for my fathers stables. I jumped on my horse and rode to Glaciers house. She was the warrior with more strength than any in our village. i told her what happen but she told me that if Moon told me to run. she couldn't do anything. She said that the war had reached our planet and we couldn't wait any longer. We rode to the next village rounding up all the Elemental fighters that we could but those were the only ones left. We built a fortress with all our strength. That was the last day.

Chapter 3 by Tristan Keane

Carbon POV

I slunk through the woods in my hunting gear, a dagger in my hand and a bow on my back. I had lined up a stag for the kill when someone or something scared it off. I was about to chase it when three men in blacks skin tight clothing stepped out into the clearing.

I quickly pulled up my cloak and stood in a shadow. If you think you are seen then you are seen, I told myself for the 500th time. The warriors were speaking with what sounded like clicks and growls. Then very slowly, I drew my bow and notched three arrows at once. Carbon is invisible and scentless, yet very deadly.

I released my arrows all three of them should have been kill shots no doubt, yet the warriors simply caught them out of the air. They zeroed in on my hiding spot I remained still but I knew since the knew the trajectory of the arrows they knew where I was. So I bolted, I ran as fast as I could yet the warriors kept gaining on me, finally I burst through the tree line and into the meadow where the fortress was one of the warriors grabbed my cloak but I swung around and impaled him in the chest with my dagger and he dissolved into smoke. I slid under the gate just as it closed behind me. I collapsed in the middle of the forum.
